White Construction Group In Castle Rock Hosts Chamber “Business After Hours”

CASTLE ROCK, Colo., March 13, 2006 –White Construction Group, a Colorado-based construction firm specializing in commercial construction, design-build, historic restorations and tenant improvement projects, along with the law firm of Folkestad Fazekas Barrick & Patoile, P.C., opened the doors to their new office building to members of the Castle Rock Chamber of Commerce at the Business After Hours monthly networking event, Feb. 22, 2006.

“There was a lot of ‘buzz’ about the new showcase building downtown,” said Diane Ludec, director of marketing for the Castle Rock Chamber of Commerce. “Other than the annual Showcase After Hours program in April, with nearly 250 members attending this event, it was the most attended this function this year.”

At 18 South Wilcox Street, the building incorporates the latest technology, space planning, Feng Shui principals and progressive design. The building’s exterior consists of a south-facing serpentine wall with an aluminum curtain wall window system, composite panel system, and pre-cast concrete cornice and band. The warm, red brick is located on the north-facing side to blend with Castle Rock’s historic downtown buildings, which are faced with locally quarried Rhyolite stone. Highlights of the interior finishes include a stair system that incorporates the use of steel tube stringers and stainless steel railing.
