White Construction Group Adds Project Engineer

CASTLE ROCK, Colo., May 10, 2005 – White Construction Group, a Colorado-based construction firm specializing in commercial construction, design-build, historic restoration and tenant improvement projects, today announced the addition of Kris Meyer as project engineer.

Kris Meyer has more than 15 years of experience in the construction industry that encompasses all aspects of construction management. Most recently, Meyer served as an office engineer for Gilbane, a Rhode Island-based builder that handles multi-million-dollar projects. Meyer's largest project involved a $40 million project for the University of New Hampshire. Meyer also has extensive experience in contract management and construction project coordination.

At White Construction Group, Meyer's responsibilities will include providing technical assistance to the project managers and superintendents. Meyer will be based at White Construction Group's Castle Rock headquarters.
