White Construction Group Adds Project Superintendent/Manager

CASTLE ROCK, Colo., June 20, 2005 – White Construction Group, a Colorado-based construction firm specializing in commercial construction, design-build, historic restoration and tenant improvement projects, today announced the addition of Larry Itzen as project superintendent/manager.

Larry Itzen has more than 17 years of commercial construction expertise in all facets of the industry. Itzen has successfully completed multi-million dollar projects ranging from office and medical buildings, to hotels, to the $22-million-dollar Aurora Town Center project, which included 12 buildings and seven tenant improvements. In the course of his career, Itzen has held the following positions: director of field operations for Key Construction Company of Wichita, Kansas; senior superintendent for Pinkard Construction of Lakewood, Colo.; project superintendent, Denver Commercial Builders of Denver, Colo.; and more. Itzen is OSHA certified and has attended numerous construction management, estimating, and team building seminars and classes.

Itzen's first project with White Construction Group is superintendent for the construction of two buildings for the City of Black Hawk – a 3,822-square-foot, single-story United States Post Office building and a 4,908-square-foot, two-story commercial building. Both buildings are wood-framed construction and feature high-end, natural stone veneer. Construction work also will include tenant improvements to house a credit union, site and utility work for both buildings, and Colorado State Highway 119 improvements, including curb and gutter work, asphalt paving, sidewalks, and extension of the storm sewer. Courtney White is the project manager on this project.
